

Bio on Andy Snider

Andy has been in the zoo field for over 24 years. During that time, he has worked at four facilities including the Central Florida Zoo, the Audubon Park Zoo, the Detroit Zoo, and now the Fresno Chaffee Zoo. He designed and was responsible for the construction of the National Amphibian Conservation Center in Detroit. He relocated to California two years ago, and is the Director of Animal Care and Conservation at the Fresno Chaffee Zoo. Andy also maintains an ever-growing collection of rescue/rehab chelonians at his home.
